In 1987, Ann Rule married serial killer Ted Bundy. Now, in this gripping memoir, she tells the full story of their twisted relationship.

Ann Rule was a true crime writer who had been following Bundy's case for years. She was fascinated by his charisma and his ability to manipulate people. When she met him in person, she was immediately drawn to him. They began a relationship, and within a few months, they were married.

Rule soon realized that Bundy was not the man she thought he was. He was a pathological liar and a manipulator. He was also a cold-blooded killer. Rule lived in constant fear, never knowing when Bundy would snap and kill her.

In 1989, Bundy was arrested for the murder of several young women. Rule was devastated. She had loved him, and she had believed that he was innocent. But she also knew that he was a dangerous man, and she was relieved that he was finally behind bars.

Rule's memoir is a fascinating and disturbing account of her relationship with Bundy. It is a story of love, loss, and betrayal. It is also a story of survival. Rule was able to escape Bundy's clutches and rebuild her life. She is now a successful author and speaker, and she has dedicated her life to helping others who have been affected by violence.

The Green River Killer

The Green River Killer is one of the most prolific serial killers in American history. He is believed to have killed at least 49 women in the Seattle area between 1982 and 1984. The Green River Killer has never been identified, but there are several suspects.

One of the suspects in the Green River Killer case is Ted Bundy. Bundy was a serial killer who was executed in 1989. Bundy confessed to killing at least 30 young women, but he never confessed to killing any of the Green River victims.

There is some evidence that suggests that Bundy may have been the Green River Killer. For example, Bundy was known to have been in the Seattle area during the time that the Green River murders were taking place. He also had a history of violence against women.

However, there is also evidence that suggests that Bundy was not the Green River Killer. For example, Bundy's DNA was not found on any of the Green River victims. Additionally, Bundy's modus operandi was different from the Green River Killer's.

The Green River Killer case remains unsolved. However, the investigation continues, and there is hope that the killer will eventually be identified and brought to justice.

Ann Rule

Ann Rule was a true crime writer who is best known for her book "The Stranger Beside Me." The book is about her relationship with Ted Bundy. Rule was a friend of Bundy's, and she had no idea that he was a serial killer until after he was arrested.

Rule's book is a fascinating and disturbing account of her relationship with Bundy. It is a story of love, loss, and betrayal. It is also a story of survival. Rule was able to escape Bundy's clutches and rebuild her life. She is now a successful author and speaker, and she has dedicated her life to helping others who have been affected by violence.

Rule's work has helped to raise awareness of the dangers of serial killers. She has also helped to provide support and comfort to victims of violence. Rule is a true hero, and her work has made a difference in the lives of many people.
