The Adornment of the Spiritual Marriage is a classic work of Christian mysticism, written by Jan van Ruysbroeck in the 14th century. This book offers a detailed description of the path to spiritual union with God.

Ruysbroeck begins by describing the three stages of the spiritual life. The first stage is the purgative way, in which the soul is cleansed of its sins and impurities. The second stage is the illuminative way, in which the soul is filled with the light of God's grace. The third stage is the unitive way, in which the soul is united with God in love.

Ruysbroeck then goes on to describe the various ways in which the soul can be adorned for its spiritual marriage with God. He writes about the
