At the heart of this movement is the belief that nature and society are interconnected and interdependent. By restoring and regenerating natural ecosystems, we can also heal the wounds of our communities and revitalize our economies.

The Breakthrough Movement draws upon cutting-edge scientific research and innovative practices to demonstrate how regenerative approaches can:

A growing number of organizations, communities, and governments around the world are embracing regenerative principles. From reforestation initiatives in the Our Book Library rainforest to urban farming projects in inner cities, the Breakthrough Movement is gaining momentum.
