The Declaration of Independence was written by a committee of five men: Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman, and Robert Livingston. Jefferson wrote the first draft of the Declaration, and it was then revised by the other members of the committee. The Declaration was then adopted by the Continental Congress on July 4, 1776, and it was signed by all fifty-six delegates who were present.

The Declaration of Independence is a powerful statement of human rights and freedoms. It begins with the famous words, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness." These words have inspired people around the world for centuries, and they continue to be a powerful reminder of the importance of human rights and freedoms.
