Gaston's writing is witty, self-deprecating, and observant, and his stories are full of laugh-out-loud moments. In "What Not to Wear to Nude Potluck," Gaston recounts the time he accidentally showed up at a nude potluck wearing a full suit. In "The Bagpipe Incident," he describes his ill-fated attempt to learn to play the bagpipes. And in "Wildlife Encounters," he shares his experiences with the many animals that inhabit Desolation Sound, including bears, whales, and eagles.

Whether you're a lifelong resident of Desolation Sound or just a visitor, you're sure to find something to love in Gaston's essays. His writing is a celebration of the unique and wonderful people and places of this special part of the world.
